Description

A Victorian silver match striker on a Bristol blue glass dish, hallmarked for London 1893.

Bristol Blue Glass is a distinctive deep cobalt-blue glassware that originated in Bristol, England, in the 18th century. Renowned for its rich colour and craftsmanship, it became highly sought after for tableware and decorative items.

The tradition continues today, with artisans using traditional glassblowing techniques to create elegant pieces. Collectors value its deep hue and historical significance, making it a symbol of British glassmaking heritage. Bristol remains a hub for this iconic art form.
