Description

A Georgian silver sparrow beak cream jug on paw feet. Hallmarked for London 1749.

Sparrow beak silver jugs are elegant, finely crafted vessels known for their distinctive shape, resembling the curved beak of a sparrow. Traditionally made from sterling silver, these jugs are prized for their aesthetic appeal and functionality, often used for pouring liquids like cream or water.

Their delicate design and smooth finish make them a popular choice for collectors and table settings. The graceful spout ensures precise pouring, blending artistry with practicality in a timeless fashion.
