Description

A set of four gilt-framed Indian hand-painted erotic scenes in the Mughal taste. Dating to around the first half of the 19th century.

Indian Mughal erotic paintings, flourishing during the 16th to 18th centuries, reflect a blend of sensuality, beauty, and intricate craftsmanship. These artworks, often commissioned by royal patrons, depict intimate moments, love, and passion, frequently showcasing mythological figures or courtiers.

Influenced by Persian miniatures, Mughal erotic paintings merge elegance with provocative themes, highlighting the cultural openness towards love and desire. They remain a captivating expression of the opulence and complexity of the Mughal court's visual art.
