

Rare Wedgwood black basalt creamer, circa 1800

£75

REF: 4438

Description

Rare Wedgwood black basalt creamer, circa 1800.

Wedgwood black basalt, introduced in the late 18th century, is a distinctive ceramic known for its matte, black finish and fine texture. Developed by Josiah Wedgwood, it features classical designs and detailed reliefs, often inspired by ancient art. This elegant material became popular for its striking appearance and durability.