Description

A 1930s Royal Copenhagen porcelain figure of a faun riding on a turtle.

Royal Copenhagen porcelain, founded in 1775, is renowned for its delicate craftsmanship and timeless designs. The Danish company is famous for its hand-painted blue-and-white floral motifs, particularly the "Blue Fluted" pattern, a signature design since the 18th century.

Each piece, from tableware to figurines, reflects a blend of traditional techniques and modern artistry. Royal Copenhagen's porcelain is highly sought after by collectors worldwide for its elegance, heritage, and enduring quality, symbolising Danish craftsmanship.
