Description

An Edwardian 9ct gold negligee pendant necklace set with seed pearls above two tear drop amethysts, circa 1910.

Negligée necklaces are elegant, asymmetrical necklaces popularized in the early 20th century, featuring two drops or pendants of uneven lengths hanging from a single chain. This distinctive design, often embellished with pearls, diamonds, or colourful gemstones, creates a graceful, elongated look that complements low-cut or evening dresses. The unique lopsided style adds an air of sophistication and playful charm, making negligee necklaces a timeless, versatile accessory for adding a touch of vintage glamour to any outfit.
