Description

A large Tahitian grey pearl, opal and diamond white gold stick pin.

Tahitian pearls are prized gems cultivated primarily in French Polynesia, especially around Tahiti. Unlike traditional white pearls, they are naturally dark, displaying luminous shades of black, charcoal, silver, green, peacock, and aubergine.

Formed within the black-lipped oyster, Pinctada margaritifera, each pearl reflects the ocean environment where it grows. Tahitian pearls are valued for their size, thick nacre, and rich overtones that shift with the light.

They symbolise elegance and mystery. Because they are cultured rather than mined, their creation blends human skill with nature's patience and history cherished by collectors worldwide today everywhere.
